On December 25, 2006, the body of 22-year-old Christmas Shell Isenhoff was found in a ditch near her home in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. She had been brutally stabbed to death.

The murder of Christmas Shell Isenhoff shocked the community and left her family and friends devastated. But thanks to the eyewitness account of a passerby, police were able to quickly identify and arrest the suspect, 23-year-old DeAngelo Parker.

According to the eyewitness, Parker was seen arguing with Isenhoff on the side of the road just hours before her body was found. The eyewitness said that Parker was angry and appeared to be threatening Isenhoff. The eyewitness also said that they saw Parker drive away in a white pickup truck.

Police were able to track down Parker and arrest him a short time later. He was charged with Isenhoff's murder and is currently awaiting trial.

The eyewitness account was a crucial piece of evidence in the case against Parker. Without it, police may not have been able to identify the suspect so quickly. The eyewitness's bravery and willingness to come forward helped to ensure that Isenhoff's killer will be brought to justice.
